ABSTRACT

This publication contains a project list of taped interviews and transcribed work covering approximately 900 personalities and special topics in military history. The historical material was given by various associations and individuals who donated oral histories to the U.S. Army Military History Institute for use by researchers. Each project listed in the document is coded as to the stage of its completion and accessibility. Material in a project is generally not made available until all work is completed, including obtaining access agreements. Access to the documents is open to bonafide researchers but potential users need to inquire about the status of projects of interest before coming to the Institute to conduct research. Tapes and transcripts do not circulate via interlibrary loan, and are not reproducible, except for short passages from those transcripts that are open to all researchers. All tapes and transcripts must be used in the Institute's Audio-Visual or Archives Branch. A duplicate copy of those transcripts open to all is available at the U.S. Army Center of Military History in Washington, DC. Additional information is provided describing the "Student Volunteers in History" program at the Institute. Volunteers work full-time for an academic term under an arrangement between the Institute and sponsoring faculty members at the institutions where the volunteers are students. The experience varies according to the interests of the volunteers. Areas where students may work include: special collections, museum studies, photographic archives, and the oral history branch. Office of the Director

Dear Researcher:

The Senior Officer Oral History Program (SOOHP) is sponsored jointly by the U.S. Army War College and the U.S. Army Military History Institute. This program now includes over 2000 hours of taped interviews and 100,000 transcribed pages covering about 900 military personalities and special topics. Other commands, associations and individuals have donated oral histories to the Institute for the use of researchers. This handlist, double the length of the 1987 edition, reflects the corresponding growth.

To make this handlist more useful to researchers, there are some changes from the 1987 edition. As before, each project generally is coded with respect to its completion and accessibility. The code appears on page iii. Projects in the SOOHP are not generally available for use until all work, including obtaining access agreements, is complete. The exception is projects which have come from other sources. Often access agreements do not exist or were not provided to the Institute. Access in these cases is generally regarded as open to bonifide researchers (OB). Work to complete remaining projects continues. Potential users should inquire about the status of projects of interest shown as incomplete before coming to the U.S. Army Military History Institute to conduct research.

Tapes and transcripts do not circulate via interlibrary loan and are not reproducible, except for short passages from transcripts otherwise open to all researchers. Tapes and transcripts must be used in the Institute's Audio-Visual or Archives Branch. A duplicate copy of transcripts open to all is available at the U.S. Army Center of Military History in Washington, D.C.

Send inquiries about the Senior Officer Oral History Program to:

Assistant Director for Educational Services
U.S. Army Military History Institute
Carlisle Barracks, PA 17013-5008
(Telephone: 717-245-4113 Autovon: 242-4113)

A GUIDE TO THE UNITED STATES ARMY MILITARY HISTORY INSTITUTE

CARLISLE BARRACKS
PENNSYLVANIA
17013-5008

INTRODUCTION TO THE INSTITUTE

The Military History Institute collects, preserves, and provides to researchers source materials of American military history. The Institute is housed in Upton Hall, named after Brevet Major General Emory Upton (1839-1881), author of The Armies of Asia and Europe and The Military Policy of the United States Since 1775. Upton Hall, built in 1941, was the academic building for the Army Medical Field Service School and for the Army War College prior to becoming home for the U.S. Army Military History Research Collection in July 1967. The Research Collection, renamed the U.S. Army Military History Institute in April 1977, holds more than one million items relating to military history. No other agency has as extensive a collection of materials relating exclusively to the role of the military in the development of the United States. The Military History Institute strives to perpetuate the history and traditions of the Army, the Army's role in the development of the United States, and the lives of the men and women involved in its development.

The nucleus of the Institute's holdings came from three sources: The U.S. Army War College, the National War College and the U.S. Army Command and General Staff College. These three schools collectively transferred more than 120,000 volumes to the Institute. These books, dating from as early as the fifteenth century, provide the historical roots of the American Army.

HOLDINGS

The Military History Institute receives materials from libraries throughout the Army, as well as from individual and group donors. In addition to purely military matters, the items include coverage of allied fields such as law, science and technology, sociology, medicine, religion, exploration, economics, geography, political science, and literature. Many relate to military and diplomatic affairs of foreign nations, for the military history of the United States has been closely intertwined with that of other nations.

Original source materials are a vital part of the Military History Institute's holdings. Diaries, letters, memoirs, photographs, art work, and personal records provide intimate insights into the past. The Institute's holdings include the original handwritten manuscript of Upton's Military Policy of the United States, the personal papers of hundreds of prominent generals, and the papers of thousands of junior officers and enlisted men and women whose services contributed to American military history from the colonial period to the present.

Starting with approximately 2,000 volumes and a staff of 3 in July 1967, the Institute has grown in over 21 years to a staff of 40 with over 236,000 volumes; 9,000 bound periodicals; 730,000 photographs; 40,000 audio/visual items; over 5,000,000 manuscripts including diaries, memoirs, letters, and other papers; and over 400,000 classified and unclassified military documents, including publications in numbered series.

STAFF ASSISTANCE

The Institute cannot conduct extensive research for patrons but will gladly provide research and reference assistance. Such assistance includes bibliographic guidance, explanation of the various finding aids, reference help to on-site patrons and via correspondence, and assistance in locating material.

ACCESS TO HOLDINGS AND FACILITIES

a. Circulation. The U.S. Army Military History Institute collections are non-circulating. Books and other items may not be withdrawn by individuals other than members of the Carlisle Barracks community.

b. Interlibrary Loans. Published books after 1914 may be borrowed only through interlibrary loan request from a library. The following materials are not available through interlibrary loan:

(1) Manuscripts
(2) Oral history transcripts
(3) Photographs
(4) Maps
(5) Art work of all types
(6) Rare books
(7) Books in poor physical condition.
(8) Periodicals. Articles may be photocopied. See d. below.

c. Carrels. Carrels are available in the library. These will be assigned upon application and can be retained by the individual during the entire term of research and study. Portable typewriters and computers may be taken to carrels or study areas provided they do not disturb other patrons.

d. Copying. Copying of printed materials is subject to the following:

(1) Cost: Rates are prescribed by Army regulations. As of 1989, the rates are: $3.50 for the first six pages and $.10 for each additional page. Photocopying service for each patron is limited to 100 pages per year.

(2) Copies are provided for research and study use only. The Institute does not involve itself in any way in granting permission for publication of such copies. Copyright permission must be obtained by the individual concerned when required. Information regarding publication rights may be obtained from the Institute staff.

e. Cameras. As a general rule, cameras are not permitted. Special permission may be obtained when research requirements so dictate. Flash attachments or electronic flash units will not be used without specific prior permission.

f. Classified Materials. Access to classified materials is available only in accordance with current Army regulations. Information about access may be obtained from the Classified Records Manager.

g. Artifacts. Although not an Army museum, some military artifacts, military art and other three-dimensional holdings are available for research at the Institute only. The Curator of USAMHI will make artifacts available upon request of the visitor; however, artifacts permanently mounted for museum display will not be removed from cases.

h. Oral History Program. In 1970, the Army Chief of Staff directed that a program of debriefing senior retired officers and civilians be established. MHI was asked to conduct the program using Army War College students as the interviewers. Since then over 700 individuals have been interviewed in this continuing program, which ranges across years of military experience and focuses on the background of key issues and decisions. Transcripts are maintained in the Manuscript Archives Branch and are available for use by researchers in accordance with the interviewee's signed access agreement.

INQUIRIES

Inquiries concerning the Military History Institute, its holdings or use of its facilities should be sent to:

U.S. Army Military History Institute
Carlisle Barracks, PA 17013-5008
Telephone (717) 245-3611;
AUTOVON 242-3611.

HAROLD KEITH JOHNSON CHAIR OF MILITARY HISTORY

Each academic year the Military History Institute provides the Harold Keith Johnson Chair of Military History to a distinguished Professor of Military History. These scholars, invited to Carlisle Barracks, teach courses at the Army War College, lecture at other service schools and serve as a bridge between the academic and the Army historical communities.

PUBLICATIONS

The Institute periodically publishes bibliographies and inventories of its holdings and makes many more available electronically. Selected bibliographies are available to other libraries/individuals through interlibrary loan.

COLLEGE STUDENT VOLUNTEERS

The Institute frequently hosts college student volunteers during the summer, fall, winter, or spring semesters. This practical experience in military history is closely related to the student's academic major, such as history or library science. Details of the program can be obtained from:

Assistant Director for Educational Services
U.S. Army Military History Institute
Carlisle Barracks, PA 17013-5008
Telephone (717) 245-4113.

DONATIONS WELCOME

Constant effort is made to improve and expand the Institute's holdings. Acquisition of books, periodicals, and other published materials is one means of increasing the usefulness of the Institute. Another is by adding to the large collection of personal papers reflecting the American military experience.

Men and women who served in uniform often had or have items of historical interest, which should be preserved for posterity and made available for scholarly research. Personal papers and records, letters, diaries, memoirs, photographs, and art work accumulated during and after service in uniform will be of great importance to the historians of the future. Many individuals have family papers and records, as well as personal library collections, which will be of research interest. All of these items reflect the history, the traditions, the legends, and the accomplishments of the armed services and should be preserved.

The U.S. Army Military History Institute actively solicits archival and pictorial material relating to all periods of United States history in peacetime and in war. Information about the general nature of materials desired and assistance with specific contributions may be obtained from:

STUDENT VOLUNTEERS IN HISTORY
AT THE
U.S. ARMY MILITARY HISTORY INSTITUTE

1. The U.S. Army Military History Institute, collocated with the U.S. Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, exists to facilitate and encourage the official and unofficial use and study of military history. To this end, the Institute is the central repository for all unofficial records of the Army. The collection includes over two million items--documentary materials, maps, paintings, photographs, magnetic media, and artifacts.

2. To process materials more quickly and to acquaint beginning scholars with its holdings, the Institute accepts a few student volunteers each year. The Assistant Director for Educational Services is the point of contact for all administrative matters, including the evaluation of individual volunteers.

3. Normally a volunteer works full-time for an academic term under an arrangement between the Institute and a sponsoring faculty member at the institution where the volunteer studies. Part of each week is set aside for work on projects the sponsor assigns. The experience of each volunteer varies according to his/her interests, the branch to which he/she goes, and the priorities of work at the Institute. Staffing and other constraints limit the options open to students at any particular time. Some students may work directly for the Assistant Director for Educational Services, who also directs the oral history program. Others may work directly for the chiefs of other branches. All students receive an orientation to all branches of the Institute and will have some assigned readings on various aspects of public history. All students should expect to be assigned occasionally to tasks outside the branch in which they are working. Such tasks may include work on special projects to support the U.S. Army War College or Carlisle Barracks. These tasks often entail a high degree of creativity and individual responsibility.

4. Representative opportunities for different branches follow:

a. Special Collections provides two distinct opportunities but limit participants to one at a time.

(1) Museum Studies:

This program explores all facets of museum curatorial work. Students are introduced to and gain experience in accessioning, classifying, cataloging and filing/storing objects in collections. The student will meet donors and see first hand negotiations and staff involvement with prospective donors. The student will have opportunities to visit antique shops and attend gun shows. He will have experience in the care of collections, proper cleaning methods and hands-on, day-by-day work with the artifacts. Training sessions will discuss philosophy, ethics, security and education as relates to museums. Exhibit techniques, exhibit interpretation and scriptwriting and visits to local museums will round out the semester. Several required readings dealing with various aspects of museum work are also included.

(2) Photographic Archives:

This program explores all facets of photographic archival work. The student will have an introduction to the various technologies of photography from its inception in 1839 to the present. Accessioning, cataloging, filing and photo search methods will be studied. Basic conservation skills in the handling and preservation of photographic collections are pursued. The student will organize and catalog at least one collection of photographs. He will also work with visiting patrons and answer correspondence from individuals seeking photographs. The semester's work will give the student all of the basic archival skills necessary to pursue a career in the photographic archives field. Several required reading assignments dealing with various aspects of photo archival work are also included.

b. The Archives Branch actively involves selected students in all facets of working with manuscript letters, diaries, and memoirs. Such work includes writing to prospective donors, organizing collections, and helping researchers who visit, phone, or write to us. Some student volunteers have concentrated on a particular project within that branch, such as providing finding aids to unindexed transcripts of oral history memoirs. Some students may be permitted to work as bibliographers, working to produce a volume for our Special Bibliography Series.

c. The Oral History Branch engages volunteers in several parts of the process of creating oral history. Students may edit transcripts from specific projects, such as the Company Commanders in Vietnam (CCIV) series. Students may also prepare indexes to series and help in preparing or updating finding aids for the program. In rare instances, students may act as interviewers.

d. In the Reference Branch volunteers gain a broad view of military history. Tasks include answering inquiries by conducting research and drafting replies that include bibliographic citations, preparing specialized bibliographies for future use by patrons of the Institute, and organizing special collections and finding aids to those collections.

5. Housing is entirely the responsibility of the student volunteer. Inexpensive housing is scarce. The Institute can help full-time volunteers who live beyond commuting distance from Carlisle by authorizing the Housing Division, Carlisle Barracks, to provide referral lists. These lists include rental costs, descriptions of facilities, and a point of contact. The search for housing should start as soon as the student is sure he is coming to the Institute.

6. For further information, contact Dr. James W. Williams, Assistant Director for Educational Services, U.S. Army Military History Institute, Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania 17013-5008. Telephone: (717) 245-4113.
